Admission Requirements

A graduate student-at-large (SAL) is an individual who does not wish to pursue a degree but wants to take courses for professional or scholarly reasons, personal enrichment, or to take a few courses before deciding whether to apply to a program. SALs are not admitted to degree-granting programs. As non-degree seeking students, SALs have permission to take undergraduate and graduate-level classes. However, if later admitted to a degree-granting program, only nine credit hours taken as an SAL may be applied toward a degree at the discretion of the program. SALs are subject to all of the same rules governing degree-seeking graduate students. Graduate SALs must have earned a baccalaureate degree or higher from a regionally accredited college or university. Graduate SALs do not qualify for financial aid.
